

Legislative decisions in 2009 will impact higher education for many years to come

The 2009 Legislative Session is of urgent importance to all those directly and indirectly involved in higher education in Washington State. Decisions made in this biennial funding session have the potential to impact higher education for many years to come.

That's why we'll be publishing the HECB Legislative Report each Friday during the session. It will be posted on the HECB Web site at www.hecb.wa.gov/leg/SessionInformation.asp and distributed via e-mail. If you want to be added or removed from the Legislative Report distribution list, go to this Web page: <http://listserv.wa.gov/cgi-bin/wa?SUBED1=HECBLEGREPORT&A=1>

This new report is an expanded version of the Financial Aid Newsletter the HECB has sent out weekly during previous legislative sessions. Financial aid news will continue to be highlighted in this publication, and we will provide links to additional updates on our Web site.

Recommended cuts will challenge institutions

Ann Daley, executive director of the Higher Education Coordinating Board, said the cuts proposed in the Governor's 2009-11 budget present a serious challenge for state higher education institutions as they attempt to maintain their current level of core services. However, she added, the cuts are less than originally expected and far less than in past recessions. Read more

Budget proposal keeps SFA funding steady in 2009-11

Funding for student financial aid in the Governor's proposed 2009-11 budget would remain steady for the most part and in some cases would increase over funding in the current biennium.

The Governor proposes modest increases for the State Need Grant (SNG), State Work Study (SWS), and WAVE programs. The Washington Scholars program would sustain a first-year cut but receive an increase in year two.

Conditional Scholarship program and the Passport to College Promise program for foster youth—continue to be funded. And additional funding is allocated to the College Bound Scholarship endowment for future scholarship disbursements to eligible students who have been enrolling in the program.

The Governor's proposal also lowers the maximum income cutoff for SNG eligibility to 65 percent of the state's median family income (MFI). This is a reduction from the current year's service level of 70 percent MFI. Using this year's MFI chart, a 65 percent MFI cutoff represents $49,000 for a family of four.

SNG award amounts for students with MFIs of 51 percent and above would continue to be prorated, but the percentages of awards would be different from those currently in use. For example, a student whose family earns 51 to 65 percent of MFI would receive three-quarters of a maximum award. The Governor's budget would reduce the award to 70 percent, 65 percent or 50 percent of the maximum award in 5 percent increments of MFI.

The maximum SNG award for eligible students attending private four-year schools remains unchanged from the 2008-09 level.

Senate committee urged to keep focus on long-term goals

Ann Daley, HECB executive director, encouraged members of the Senate Higher Education Committee to maintain focus on the long-range goals outlined in the Strategic Master Plan for Higher Education.

"That work is valuable – maybe even more valuable in these kinds of times," Daley said. The plan's central goal is to raise educational attainment to build a stronger economy and society.

Daley, Bill Grinstein, past HECB chair, and others met with the committee on December 4.

Outgoing committee Chair Paull Shin said the state faces a "defining moment" as it considers state institutions' funding requests during the current economic downturn.
